My immediate professional goal is to become a strategy consultant in a firm like a top firm like McKinsey or BCG where I would be able to work with complex business issues in all industries and geographic regions. The position will also assist me in sharpening my analytical decisions along with acquisition of executive level of communication and learning how high-impact organizations can turn a strategy into concrete results. Being a sales and marketing personality, I have noticed how prospective products and inspired teams end up failing due to lack of a rational plan and coherent leadership. Consulting career will help me close this gap and hasten my growth into becoming a business leader. My long-term objectives are to be a top-level leader in a developing company and ultimately build a business that will be founded on sustainable and inclusive business solutions. I am also focused on becoming an entrepreneur to create the organizations which can be not only successful in the sphere of commerce but also may help government and social problems of the world, such as in the developing world, the world where innovations and ethical management are required. My vision is to be a leader who incorporates financial discipline and value creation that will last long to the society. To accomplish these goals, it is important to have an MBA at Harvard Business School. The experience of studying at Harvard Business School will allow me to master the art of making a successful decision by exposing me to practical business-related cases. Others relating such courses as Leadership, Organization Behavior and Strategy will improve my abilities in managing different teams and creating scalable business models. The HBS population is also highly essential. The process of studying in a multicultural environment with various international and professional life events will assist in broadening my thoughts and busting my turbo. The focus of the School on leaders who make a difference sounds good to the part of my wish to make a difference beyond profit.
